

treasures. I thought that maybe things are not as different as I imagine.

Little children in Bible times might have imagined small household items as chariots or carts, pushing them along the floor. There are universal things that transcend generations.

Because God, who created mankind in his own image, understands these universal things, the books of antiquity we know as Scripture still speak to us.

While earlier generations would know nothing of computer fraud or online identity theft, there is no new sin... only different manifestations of the same old things. Mankind, as always, seeks to be safe and important. These drives motivate what we do. Healthy pursuits find fulfillment in God. Shortcuts result in sinful behavior harming both others and the perpetrator.

As Eve was looking for a “quick” way to be like God, knowing good from evil, the fruit looked like an inviting shortcut. The idea that God was “holding out” on them, was the deception accomplished by Satan. Both Adam and Eve decide that their way was better than God’s way.

We push that same button across the floor day after day. Turning the other cheek doesn’t seem the appropriate response to attacks against us. Forgiving 70 times 7 seems an unfair command heaped upon us. Returning a blessing for a curse causes us to shudder, as we slide that little round button across the floor, choosing to retaliate again. It isn’t new, but the Scriptures don’t have to be new to speak to age old issues of life.

When I was a boy, every house had a button box. I can remember looking through my Grandmother Feril’s button box. Most of the buttons there were buttons for shirts, as she made shirts for us and recycled the old buttons. It makes me smile to think I wore shirts that might have had the buttons from my father’s old shirt, or my grandfather’s shirt.

The special buttons in that box would have come from “store bought” ladies fancy blouses or dresses. Usually the ladies buttons would have been larger and easily noticed, destined for a future dress or apron. Playing with a few of the buttons, they could become a car that might be pushed upon the linoleum in the front room.

We live in a different time now. Button boxes are a thing of the past. Children are robbed of the opportunity to push a button on the floor like a car, parking them on the imaginary streets in their mind.

I observed Mara playing on the floor in the living room the other day. She had her “button”, it was a small box that had been a mint container. She was also playing with an old medicine bottle that held some of her
