From The Elders at the St John Church of Christ

What kind of things that we learn as we study will help bring us to the “happily ever after” at the end of our adventure here on earth? Consider the Lord's invitation: “Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest.” When life hurts and we wonder how we can carry on, we can find rest in Him. He won't always give us premature resolution to our problems, but He will give us faith that the resolution is coming. Also when things do not seem to be working out as quickly as we would like, we can know that the Lord is giving us time to learn and grow before our story comes to an end.

We all need to remember God loves us all even when we are not following His ways and understanding His discipline, but we can know that He is loving, kind, merciful, and patient. He longs for us to turn back to Him but does not force us. So when someone we love is not following God's ways we just have to love them and try to point them back toward God. But remember, God gave them free will just like He did each of us. Don't give up on them, God won't. Have a blessed week ahead. Take time to see God in the world around you as you go through your busy week. It will give you peace and refreshment. - The Elders
